Bank of Italy Conversion Is Okeyed by U.S.

Government Approves Nationalization of Financial Company on Coast

Nationalization of the Bank of Italy and the conversion of its state-wide system of branches into Bank of Italy, National Trust and Savings Association has been formally approved by the comptroller of the currency and the Federal Reserve Board, it was announced today by James A. Baicaluppi, president of the institution.

The entire organization will be merged immediately into the national system, and on Tuesday morning all of the branch offices will open for business under the new designation.

"Nationalization of the Bank of Italy under the provisions of the McFadden act is the concluding step in the perfection of our state-wide service," said Baicaluppi. "Nationalization not only means continuing operation within the Federal Reserve system, but also assures for the institution the full benefit of the modernized powers conferred upon national banks.

For a considerable period the Bank of Italy has held an important role in the finances of the nation and the world, and also as the largest member of the Federal Reserve system in the Twelfth District. The time has now come when the bank should assume the responsibility that attends the national prominence to which it has risen, and we believe the most direct way in which to do this is through purchasing our present course.

"In addition, it is obvious that California is certain to gain in prestige by possessing the second largest national bank in America in the ranking published by Financial Age of New York; and, as ardent Californians, we can scarcely be unmindful of whatever may redound to the benefit of the state in which the institution was cradled and in which it has experienced such prosperity."

The Bank of Italy is credited with the second largest holdings of government bonds in the United States, ranking next to the First National Bank of New York.

OBSERVATIONS

the ability of the churches to attract people, not through legislation or enforcement of old, old laws.

True, the church has more competition than it used to have. But legislation against that competition will not help. As times change, so must institutions. We believe that somewhat more general observance of the Sabbath would do the country plenty of good. But we are not in favor of attempts to force people to do something which their failure to do now hurts nobody else.

Miss Huston spoke of the preview committee's work in viewing the pictures, and mentioned how changes were made in the film to make a better and more acceptable picture.
